TEXT:

You know we have real problems at the Radisson. I really need you two to focus on this and brainstorm with me a little and decide whether this damn hotel is worth the aggravation.

1. Did you know this: Only 10% of the money in the Radisson is American. For all this fuss and bother about "supporting American business", it's only 10% American money. The non-American investors in the Slavjanskaya Hotel bought the Radisson NAME and a minor affiliation with use of the logo on laundry bags, period.

2. On the NBC rooms: a non-starter. NBC will not budge. You two get it, I know, about what that means to the President's, oh, shall we say, 'not swell' press relationships, if one network is in that hotel and I can't fit the others all in. And I CAN'T.

Among the three of us: I can shoot straight and blunt with Tim Russert and he can with me, and we both understand the problem of the other person. We are trying to create some middle ground to solve the problem for both of us. But we don't have it yet. And NBC has a contract with the Radisson.

Whatever pinhead at the embassy reassured us that NBC was "out" screwed up, BIG. But that's under the bridge.

You two understand the real world well enough to know that the President pays a real price when there is a serious imbalance in the competitive position of the networks, and the White House is at fault. Even though we're at fault, we'll be blamed.

Everyone kept murmuring sympathy about this issue to me over the last few weeks, but I need more than that, please. I need some collegial help here, and fast.

3. This is the killer: Reuters (and maybe NBC) have a screwball deal with the Radisson under Russian contractual law (a fledgling field at best, but it's all wildcatters right now): Reuters holds all the roof rights, all the transmission rights at the Radisson. That is HUGE. Do you know the implications of that for the media? Maybe for AT&T and WHCA. This is the answer I was waiting for, Mike, and it's the answer I didn't want. This is a heart stopper. The Pool producer has his stomach pretty tight right about now, too.

4. You know we have very very serious phone problems in Moscow in any circumstance. We have learned that we can have effective phones only if WHCA and AT&T are operating out of the same place. That's why this gets very serious now if I have half the press in another place, or if the staff is at one hotel and the Press at another.

We need to talk. I know you're busy and so am I, but I need your help, now.

This hotel is more trouble than it's god damn worth. If I truly believed Wall Street would get shivers of joy and send stocks to record highs because the President is showing his support by staying in a hotel with 10% American money, I might feel differently about this.

HELP.

Memorandum for Leon Panetta

From: Mark Gearan

cc: Ricki Seidman

Subject: Interview Strategy for Six Weeks Following Labor Day

This memo will outline a proposed schedule of interviews for the six-week period following the President's vacation.

In the past 10 days, we have aimed most of the President's public time at showing his dedication to passing a bipartisan crime bill and stopping the flow of illegal Cuban refugees. We have tailored interviews to those objectives, while limiting public appearances that are unrelated to those goals. We have also scheduled off-the-record sessions with White House journalists and columnists to improve relations with the press corps and present a fuller picture of the President. Finally, we have lined up an array of interviews this week designed to showcase the unveiling of the national service program Americorps.

When the President returns from his vacation in early September, we will have a host of opportunities and challenges before us. In the month of September, the President will sign the crime bill (hopefully), make a major speech to the National Baptist Convention, kick off Americorps, celebrate the anniversary of the Reinventing Government initiative, address the United Nations General Assembly, and host a state visit by President Yeltsin. Other topics will inevitably drive news as well: the legislative battle for health care reform, the ongoing situations in Haiti, Cuba, Rwanda and Bosnia; floor votes on the GATT agreement; the O.J. Simpson trial; the Cairo conference on population; the midterm elections and the unveiling of the Republican legislative agenda for 1995. With these events in mind, I have designed an interview plan that we hope to follow through September and early October. That is set out below for your review.

CLINTON LIBRARY PHOTOCOPY

Media Plan

August 25, 1994

September

? Editorial Boards with New York Daily News. We had planned to have the President sit down with the editorial board of the Daily News this month, but will have to put it off until September. The Daily News is the nation's sixth largest newspaper; it endorsed us in 1992.

? Editorial Board with New Orleans Times-

Picayune. During your visit to the Baptists Convention in New Orleans, we would like to schedule a sit-down with the major Louisiana paper. The paper's editorial board is fairly conservative -- they endorsed President Bush in 1992 --, but it is supportive of this Administration on some issues.

? Los Angeles Times Washington Bureau. Jack Nelson, the Washington bureau chief, and his top political and foreign affairs reporters would come to the White House for a round-table session. The LA Times is the nation's third largest newspaper; it made no endorsement in 1992.

? Full Press Conference in Mid-

September. The President should continue the series of press conferences we began earlier this month. A press conference on Friday, September 16th might be an ideal time to sum up his first week back on the job. We may also have several press availabilities with foreign leaders: Prime Minister Bhutto, President Yeltsin, etc.

? Foreign Policy Columnists. Before the address to the United Nations General Assembly, the President should sit down with influential foreign affairs columnists. This session will give him an opportunity to underline both our foreign policy successes and the challenges that lie ahead.

? Black Entertainment Television. In conjunction with the Congressional Black Caucus weekend, we would like to schedule an on-camera interview with BET. In that session, we could highlight this Administration's accomplishments for African-Americans and preview Nelson Mandela's visit.

Media Plan

August 25, 1994

Page 3

? Reception or Lunch for Black Publishers. During the CBC weekend, we would also like to arrange a lunch with publishers of the large black newsweeklies.

? Prime-

time Newsmagazine Appearance. We are exploring several opportunities to appear on prime-time newsmagazines to highlight this Administration's accomplishments. "60 Minutes" may be interested in a joint appearance with President Yeltsin, while "Primetime Live" may produce a show focusing on national service and Americorps.

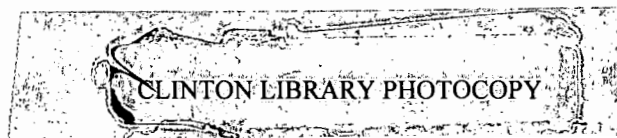

? Holiday Issues of Women's Magazine Issues. In order to appear in the Thanksgiving and Christmas issues of the larger women's magazines, we would like to schedule interviews in September and early October. As the Family Circle interview demonstrated, these magazines can focus on the more personal sides of the presidency in a productive way.

? Continue Off-

Record Sessions. We would like to continue these late afternoon off-the-record columnists, reporters and pundits. Future groups might include media critics (Tom Rosenstiel, Howard Kurtz, and Elizabeth Kolbert), a lunch with Mary McGrory, Tim Russert and Mark Shields, and a roundtable with "New Democrat" columnists.

? Talk Radio. We would like to schedule weekly talks or visits with to radio talk show hosts like yesterday's session with Gene Burns. We may begin with Judy Jarvis in New England, Michael Jackson in Los Angeles, and NPR's "Talk of the Nation."
Early October

? South African Follow-

Up. Immediately before the South African elections, the President sat down with Anthony Lewis (NY Times), Clarence Page (Chicago Tribune) and South African journalists. To preview the Mandela visit, we would like to schedule a follow-up interview with Page and Lewis.

Media Plan

? Regional Political Reporters. To highlight the Democratic political message for the mid-term elections, it would be helpful to bring in political reporters who are following races around the country: Tom Fiedler (Miami Herald), Tom Baxter (Atlanta Journal), Fred Brown (Denver Post), Dan Walters (Sacramento Bee), etc. They could also spend some time with White House staff, the DNC and the campaign committees.

? Women's Magazine Interview or Lifestyle Piece. There may be an opportunity around the President and the First Lady's wedding anniversary to do an interview focusing on the personal side of the First Family like the USA Weekend piece on the President and his mother and the Family Circle article on the President on Father's Day.

? Editorial Boards with Regional Papers. As the President travels to fund -raising events around the country, we would like to have him touch base with editorial boards that endorsed his candidacy in 1992.

MEMORANDUM FOR

FROM:

DON BAER

SUBJECT:

OFF THE RECORD SESSIONS WITH COLUMNISTS.

As we approach the upcoming campaign season, it is of increased importance that we begin to reach out to our core press to reintroduce them to the President. Therefore, I would like to restart the process of inviting columnists in to meet with the President for off the record sessions. In the past we have invited 4

-6 columnists to spend an hour with the President for a wide ranging discussion. These sessions proved useful to both the press and to the President on many levels. At this time I would suggest that it would prove more useful to invite an identified group of columnists in for one

-on

-one sessions with the President. I think these more intimate meetings would accomplish 2 very important goals:

? For the President to re

-cultivate his relationship with a group of press that have been supportive in the past.

? To allow the President to place his major public appearances into the proper context.

The press will not defend the record of a stranger. They not only want to know the person that they are covering, they also like to feel like that they have a say in the process. They are more likely to feel more comfortable doing both of these if they meet with the President one

-on

-one. These sessions could be followed up by phone calls from the President from time to time to keep the relationship going. Please find my suggested press list below.

Dear Mike & Lorrie:

Let's talk tomorrow directly after the gaggle regarding the weekend TV shows.

Here's an update on where we are:

THIS WEEK (ABC)

Panetta is willing to do the honors.

FACE (CBS)

Erskine Bowles would be ideal, if he feels ready and we can persuade him.

MEET (NBC)

I pitched Rubin to Tim Russert, and I think we can get him to take Rubin. Rubin is the super secretary and can discuss everything that interests Tim.

LATE EDITION (CNN)

SESNO seems to have bought the idea of interviewing Don Baer on the poetry of politics.

FOX NEWS SUNDAY (FNC)

Even Tony Snow should get a White House guest this week, , and I suggest that Ann Lewis.

INSIDE POLITICS WEEKEND (CNN)

Blitzer needs someone for Saturday evening, and I suggest either Rahm or Sosnik. Unless McCurry wants to do it.

SUNDAY TODAY (NBC)/SUNDAY GMA (ABC)

Kiki is pushing the idea of Harold Ickes going on one or two shows. She thinks it won't be a problem and that it will demonstrate that Harold is above the fray, loyal to POTUS, and going out with his head held high. I am skeptical. I think his appearance on SUNDAY GMA or SUNDAY TODAY, would invite questions on campaign contributions and Ickes inelegant departure. I am ready to be convinced otherwise, but I remain doubtful on this one.

The following are points which came up in my recent conversations with Tim Russert which may inform his questioning of Mr. Bowles:

* Dick Morris' behavior is reprehensible in so many respects. Why would the President allow such an individual into his inner circle? What does this say about the President's character?

* Dick Morris' account of the extensive use of polling in the White House is disturbing. This kind of practice reflects a rudderless White House and President for which every last issue is coarsely political.

* Entitlement reform and most especially the push for a CPI adjustment are crucial to the future of the nation . What will the President do to make progress on these issues?

* The back-biting and bickering related to ethics inquiries may stymie all cooperation in the coming year. What can the President and Congress do to rise above these problems and get something done for the nation.

* The "Clinton legacy" must be forged in the coming year, before mid-term and presidential politics grip the nation. Can the President accomplish enough in the coming year to ensure a place for his administration in the annals of great Presidencies?

* The Clinton cabinet is once again the result of racial and ethnic bean counting. The choice of Pena was particularly appalling to Russert.

Mike:

For the foreign policy call, a reminder:

Russert wants to put COHEN & ALBRIGHT on together on Sunday to make the case for CWC. He WILL NOT put either one on SOLO.

To clinch the deal, we need to be able to tell MEET that if Albright goes out on weekeend of July 1 that MEET would get her. Tim is next on the rotation for Albright and would wait until July 1, if we can't promise him that he is still next up for Hong Kong.

I think we should promise Tim that if Albright goes out on July 1 weekend that he will get her from Hong Kong.

If State is worried about taking heat from ABC or CBS at the time, I think our office should offer to take the heat.

This is our one chance to break through on CWC this weekend, and we should go for it.

It's rich Irish Americans. Really. People who hit it big, (Clearly, this is not my crowd.)

They have big-dollar events which they carefully invest in Ireland for social impact. Charitable projects rather than commercial ones. Schools. Hospitals. Infrastructure. Civic groups. Training centers. That sort of thing. North and south, by the way.

The true believers started before Ireland was cool. They really wanted to help Ireland when Ireland needed help. Used to be they couldn't give the tickets away, and were desperate to fill a hall. Now? Now it's big money, big events, big name speakers and much more glitz and elbow-rubbing and a lot of networking among all the American CEOs and hitters who discovered they had some Irish in their family...right about when the Irish economy took off...when it became a profit center, instead of a charity. Oh my, what a coincidence.

But they are for real. Their big annual event is the St Pat's black-tie bash in DC which the President has attended. And this Nantucket event also is not new: It has been, in years past, kind of a casual gathering, casual clothes and cocktails at sunset, for that uniquely (and TOTALLY American) cultural phenomenon known as the "Boston Irish". The moneyed among them were vacationing anyway on Nantucket or the Vineyard, and they would get together on their own to shake each other down for these social-impact projects.

The Nantucket event is being host by Bob-somebody who, I'm told, is a really Good Guy. He comes from Connecticut and has done this before. The most senior Irish government type attending this year was to be the Consul General in Boston (Orla Somebody), whom I don't know. They do try to get some kind of name guest these days (now that Ireland is cool, remember) for the Nantucket party. There's always an assortment of Kennedys, and other stars local to the parochial Boston Irish. [Senator Kennedy, no kidding, has been an extraordinary support for them all these years.] John Hume was at this party last year. What they came up with for this year's "notable star" was: Tim Russert! (before they knew they had a shot at the President).

God knows who will turn up now at this party. I'm gonna take a peek at the guest list to see if there are any other notables whom we should make a fuss over.

So - THAT'S the American Ireland Fund.

Love,
Anne

IMUS

Why do pols & wonks line up to go on Imus in the Morning. They've listen to it carefully and figured out that when compared to Imus, anyone can be funny!

What I want to know, where does he find these lackeys and laugh at his alleged witticism? I understand he found [name] when he was the only idiot cackling hysterically one night at the Improv when Emo Philips was performing.

Don Imus is the thinking man's Grease Man.

Imus was right to say the people who object to his humor are too uptight. All those people who find him material objectionable are the same uptight dolts who didn't see the humor in ethnic cleansing.

Imus does not have a good history of well-received DC appearances. In fact, every time he steps in front of a microphone here in Washington, FEMA declares a state of alert.

God bless Imus. He is always doing charity events. Of course, with that face, Imus could be the poster child for most any affliction. Scurvy. Consumption. Cow Pox. Small Pox. Pox Classic. Sugar Corn Pox. Mio-cardio-infarctions [sp?] Hat Hair. The Shakes.

Just by putting his face on their fundraising pamphlet, last year $900,000 dollars was raised for the sufferers of rigor mortis.

IMUS BOOK AWARDS

Imus is not exactly a man of letters. Have you ever been in the studio with him? He can't read ad copy on the air without moving his lips!

RUSSERT

Tim spent the formative part of his career with Daniel Patrick Moynihan. Which means not only does he have unique insights into the social fabric of our nation, but that he can also fix a very dry martini.

For years, Tim has been trying every which way to book the Pope on the Meet the Press. Imagine the ego. Tim Russert can't think of anyone more powerful than himself whom the Pope want to talk to on a Sunday morning.

Carville couldn't make it but he did give me one piece of advice: He said, "go nuclear on the bastard."

JOHN KERREY

It was on Imus's program that Senator Kerrey announced his controversial policy proposal that eventually undid his presidential aspirations. At the suggestion of his wife, he announced his plan to distribute free condiments in public high schools.

[Paul: You may recall a letter you and I put together in response to Imus's request that the Prez appear at his DC broadcast. The letter of response got killed in the parking lot before it ever even reached the West Wing. Perhaps there is something to salvage for your purposes?]

Dear Mr. Imus:

Welcome back to Washington. I vaguely recall your last visit to our nation's capital and have alerted FEMA of your return.

Paul Begala of my staff has informed me of your kind invitation to appear on your show as you broadcast here this week. The White House has received many similarly appealing invitations in recent weeks but all of those have been delivered by a federal Marshall.

But a serious request deserves a serious response: No.

Just so there is no confusion, allow me to parse "no" for you.

Hell no.

Notta chance.

Negative.

Nyet.

N.O.

O-Nay.

That's a big 10-No, good buddy.

Take a regular "no" and super-size it.

Right after I go on Rush Limbaugh.

When you stop calling Mike McCurry "weasel boy"
When your television ratings hit triple digits.

Now leave me alone.

Sincerely yours,

TEXT:

It is painfully clear Tim Russert must ask both Gore and Bradley about Hilary Clinton's bold departure from the Administration's policy on "don't ask, don't tell." She has just raised the stakes, and there's no turning back.

We know what Bradley is apt to say, and he's on record. He has pushed the envelope the farthest, and built his inroads with the community based on his boldness. Here's what both said to the Advocate, on record:

Al Gore in the Advocate (September 1999)

"I would implement the policy with more compassion. I don't think the changes in the military policy are working the way they were intended to work. I would try to change that by working with military leaders to bring about an implementation strategy that's fairer."

Bill Bradley in the Advocate (October 1999)

"I have grave doubts that it ["Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy] can work. I voted for the Boxer Amendment [which would have liberalized the policy] in 1993. I think we ought to get to a time when gays can serve in the military. We need talented people. There is no reason why we can't ultimately get there."

How would you overcome the opposition?

"The timing and method of how I would do that would have to be left to me."

MY SUGGESTIONS GOING FORWARD (with an invocation of Harry Truman):

If asked whether "President Gore" would lift the ban on gays in the military, as Mrs. Clinton and Bill Bradley both seem to advocate, he can say:

"We learned three critical lessons about gays and military service in the past seven years. First, gays and lesbians always have served honorably and well in our armed forces, and they will in the future. They have fought, bled and died to protect and defend us. Let's never forget that and the debt we owe them and all veterans.

"Second, we learned that changing the military policy takes a powerful consensus, and cannot be achieved without education and willingness of our military leaders and the American people.

"Third, experience shows that the compromise we have in place does not work fairly, either for the military or for service members.

"As President, I will have the best minds together to work with our military to reform the implementation of this policy, or abandon it altogether. What I know is that the President cannot achieve it alone, and we will need a smart, bipartisan strategy to put it right.

"President Truman courageously acted to ban racial segregation among our troops over a half-century ago, however, it has taken decades to live up to that promise in the hearts and minds of the American people, too. I believe we are up to the challenge today."

TEXT:

Message Creation Date was at 14-JAN-1997 19:38:00

Dear Mike & Lorrie:

Let's talk tomorrow directly after the gaggle regarding the weekend TV shows.

Here's an update on where we are:

THIS WEEK (ABC)

Panetta is willing to do the honors.

FACE (CBS)

Erskine Bowles would be ideal, if he feels ready and we can persuade him.

MEET (NBC)

I pitched Rubin to Tim Russert, and I think we can get him to take Rubin.

Rubin

is the super secretary and can discuss everything that interests Tim.

LATE EDITION (CNN)

SESNO seems to have bought the idea of interviewing Don Baer on the poetry

politics.

FOX NEWS SUNDAY (FNC)

Even Tony Snow should get a White House guest this week, , and I suggest that

Ann Lewis.

INSIDE POLITICS WEEKEND (CNN)

Blitzer needs someone for Saturday evening, and I suggest either Rahm or Sosnik. Unless McCurry wants to do it.

SUNDAY TODAY (NBC)/SUNDAY GMA (ABC)

Kiki is pushing the idea of Harold Ickes going on one or two shows. She thinks it won't be a problem and that it will demonstrate that Harold is above the fray, loyal to POTUS, and going out with his head held high. I am skeptical. I think his appearance on SUNDAY GMA or SUNDAY TODAY, would invite questions on campaign contributions and Ickes inelegant departure. I am ready to be convinced otherwise, but I remain doubtful on this one.
